MeetMe Account Notification

August 15, 2014

Recently we discovered a security breach within our network that compromised certain information in at least some MeetMe user accounts. Specifically, between August 5 and 7 of this year, we believe that hackers gained access to user names, email addresses, and encrypted passwords of some MeetMe users. For a period of time, they may have been able to access the affected MeetMe accounts, but we have no evidence that they did so and they can no longer do so.

Our recommendation:

To be safe, we encourage you to change your MeetMe password. As always, before entering your current MeetMe password on any site, make sure that "meetme.com" appears in the address bar of your browser. Also, if you have used your MeetMe user name or password for other purposes, you should change it there as well.

Please know that we are working hard to ensure that your account remains secure even if you don't change your password, but in this case we are recommending this extra bit of precaution.

We apologize for any inconvenience or concern that this situation may cause you. If you have questions, please send them to us at support@meetme.com. Nothing is more important to us than the security and trust of our members, and we are utterly committed to providing a safe and secure community and the very best place to meet new people.
